

Article Overview

Polaris and Enicab are leading Algerian manufacturers offering direct sales of tight-sheathed optical cables for telecom and data infrastructure.

Polaris Fibre Optics

Polaris is a vertically integrated Algerian manufacturer producing optical fibre and cable systems compliant with ITU-T and IEC standards . They offer a full range of optical fibre products, including tight-sheathed cables suitable for FTTH, metro, and backbone networks. Polaris provides:

- o Custom cable constructions with fibre counts from 2 to 288 .
- o G.652.D and G.657.A2 fibre types, supporting both standard and tight-bend installations .
- o Direct sales and pre-sales consultation, including specification review and deployment planning .
- o Full compliance documentation and test certificates with each delivery, including OTDR traces and attenuation measurements .
- o Lead times: 7-21 days for standard products, 4-6 weeks for custom or large-volume orders . Polaris emphasizes shorter lead times, responsive technical support, and collaboration with network planners, making them suitable for national and multi-country infrastructure projects .

Enicab

Enicab, based in Biskra, Algeria, manufactures a wide range of standard and special cables, including optical fibre solutions for telecommunications . Key features include:

- o Custom cable production tailored to specific project requirements.
- o Large storage capacity ensuring product availability.
- o Technical support and project optimization through their in-house design and development office .
- o Applications span energy, telecom, petrochemical, and industrial sectors, indicating versatility in deployment .

Summary

For direct procurement of tight-sheathed optical cables in Algeria, Polaris is ideal for telecom and data centre projects requiring ITU-T compliant fibre, while Enicab offers customized solutions with strong local support. Both manufacturers provide technical assistance, compliance documentation, and flexible production to meet project-specific needs.
